Human-Centered Design survey

In the ongoing response to COVID-19, the state of Minnesota has established targeted work groups to assist the State Emergency Operation Center in developing reportable goals, metrics, and workplans to respond to the various challenges posed by the disease, its spread, and its diverse impact on all Minnesotans. The Social Distancing work group is developing short- and long-term strategies to help Minnesotans stay safe and healthy while working to enable more social and economic activity.

We're tackling this question through a variety of approaches, including a Human-Centered Design methodology – one that puts people at the center of the problem solving process. This method allows us to better understand the impacts of social distancing, new norms and practices, and governmental guidelines on not only organizations and businesses, but on the people we all serve.

As we seek insights and feedback from across Minnesota to inform our work, we invite you to take this approximately 15 minute survey through Survey Monkey. We will be releasing this survey to leaders representing organizations across the state (businesses, nonprofits, places of worship, community organizations, etc.) We're asking that you complete the survey by May 8 for our first round of analysis but will keep the survey open to continuously collect community input.

This survey is confidential, and any results will be anonymized before sharing out. If you would like help completing this survey, please contact Kirsten.henry@state.mn.us.
